

Robert Kingery Favors Approval of S. W. For Federal Aid

Favorable consideration was given by Robert J. Kingery of the Illinois Highway Dept., to a request of Southwest Highway Boosters that the stretch of 54 miles from Marley to Saunemin be recommended for construction by Federal aid, at a meeting with a group of interested road boosters in his office in the state house in Springfield Wednesday noon.

Present at this meeting were Senators R. J. Barr, Simon E. Lantz, Representatives, Frank Foster, Harvey, John Walker, Joliet, Charles M. Turner, representatives from the DeCature Chamber of Commerce, Dr. W. R. Schussler, Wm. T. Beagley, Mayor Wm. Kollman, all of Orland, Edward Cowan, Palos Park, Editor Wm. Semmler of Mokena, Fred Kohlman of Custar Park, Eugene Hoermann, Manhattan, Mayor Fitzpatrick and Mr. Maemer of Campus, Ill.

Senator Barr arranged for this meeting with Mr. Kingery Monday morning after a committee consisting of Mayor Wm. Kollman, village trustee Edgar Cooper, Dr. W. R. Schussler, all of Orland Park and Editor Wm. Semmler of Mokena, called on the senator asking his aid in getting the project before the state highway authorities for recommendation for federal aid.

Dr. Schussler at Springfield explained the plan in detail to Mr. Kingery of making the Southwest Highway an international highway from Canada to Mexico City and Dr. Schussler showed on a map the territory the Southwest highway will run thru, the portions of the highway already completed and the gap of 54 miles which remains unpaved in Illinois from Marley to Saunemin.

Senators Barr and Lantz also talked on this project. Mr. Kingery expressed himself as being for the completion of this gap in Illinois and gave the assurance that he would recommend that the 54 miles be in the 1000 miles of road to be recommended by the state for federal aid, provided no other roads of greater importance than the Southwest highway come up for consideration. Mr. Kingery considered the Southwest Highway project an important and worthy one. Mr. Kingery was very cordial and readily gave the impression that he is sincere in his attitude on the highway in question. The road boosters were much pleased at the kindly reception accorded them by Mr. Kingery.

Following the adjournment of the conference with Mr. Kingery, Senator Barr invited the Cook and Will county road boosters, also the mayor of Essex and several friends who were also members of the party who met with Mr. Kingery, to be his guests at a luncheon at the Abraham Lincoln hotel.

After the luncheon the delegation met with Governor Henry Horner and outlined to him the Southwest Highway project and advised him of the meeting with Mr. Kingery. The Governor replied he would act on the recommendations as made by Mr. Kingery.

After seeing the Governor, the delegation visited the legislature and occupied seats in the president's gallery watching the deliberations of the senate and saw their senators in action.

With the completion of the 54 mile gap in Illinois and gaps in some of the adjoining states, the Southwest Highway is completed most of the way. This Highway will be one of the most important in the United States. It will cross the states of Illinois, Missouri, Louisiana, Texas, and across the border to Mexico City.

Orland Boy Dies In Grandmother's Arms

The friends of the Robert Cure family of Orland Park were greatly shocked and grieved over the tragedy which entered this home Monday morning when their son Robert, Jr., died quite suddenly while being taken to a Chicago hospital.

He came home Thursday noon from school at Orland Park complaining that he was not feeling well. He became quite ill and regardless of the efforts of two physicians, one from Blue Island and one from Lockport, his case became desperate. An infection developed which spread rapidly. Monday morning he was being taken to a Chicago hospital and died in his grandmother's arms, while arrangements were being made for his entry into the hospital.

The body was taken to the Hallinan Funeral Parlor in Blue Island where private services were held Wednesday morning. Burial was in St. Benedict's cemetery near Blue Island.

Robert, Jr., was seven years old. He is survived by his parents and one brother, Donald.

Attempt to Rob Coin Box Fails

An attempt was made to rob the coin box in the public telephone booth in the Rock Island depot at Mokena Friday night. The box was jimmied but was not opened. This booth has been robbed several times.

Mokena Couple Meet Seth Parker

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stellwagon and the latter's brother Alfred Hatch who have returned from a recent automobile trip thru Florida, report a wonderful trip. They visited with a number of Mokena folks, Mr. and Mrs. George Cooper, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hacker. They also called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Lynk near Orlando, but they were not at home.

Among the outstanding things of interest was the personal meeting of Phillips Lord better known as Seth Parker of radio fame, who was with his ship at Miami. They visited the oldest house in Florida and also the spring of youth of Ponce de Leon fame. They visited other historical places including the monument at Vicksburg, Mississippi of the Union army. In this monument appear the names of the northern soldiers who fought at Vicksburg and among which appears the name of John A. Hatch of Mokena, father of Mrs. Stellwagon.

Many other interesting places and sights were seen in other Southern States thru which their route went.

Mokena Baseball Season Opens Apr. 29

Well, at last the old pill tossing season is at hand again. The Mokena Aces are starting out the season by playing the Bremen Indians from Blue Island on April 29th at 2:30 P. M. at Mokena.

The boys are all out limbering up their arms and airing out the old uniforms. Mokena is developing a team this year that is plenty fast and hard to beat.

Cappel is the likely tosser with about the same old team behind him. Pinky Frisch and Yutch Benson are two new faces for the team so far this year. The boys have promised some mighty fine ball playing this year, so let's all go out to the game and boost our team.

Pink lemonade and hard tack biscuit (so hard you can't eat it) will be served to those who wished they would have stayed home, providing they are 90 years old and accompanied by their grand parents.

Metal Monument Stolen From Grave

Even the dead are not safe from being robbed of their monuments these days as was shown last week when the discovery was made that a metal monument weighing about 500 pounds was stolen from the grave of James Holmes in the Marshall cemetery in New Lenox township. The monument was so constructed that four metal panels were fastened with screws to the frame part. On the panels appeared the names of the deceased members of the family and the name of James Holmes appeared quite prominently on the monument, which has marked the resting place of Holmes for thirty years.

Marks in the soft earth left a trace of the moving of the marker from the grave to a waiting truck, the wheel marks of which were visible outside of the cemetery fence.

The Holmes family were among the pioneer settlers of New Lenox township.

The Will County sheriff's office was notified of the theft. A few years ago an attempt was made to move the marker. It had been tipped over and a hole knocked into it.

State Health Official Calls at Orland

Orland Park has had a scare as a result of a number of cases of mumps, chicken pox and scarlet fever cases.

On Tuesday Dr. DeRose, Supt., of State Board of Health of Springfield called at the Orland Park school in the afternoon and examined the children and gave his O. K. on those examined. He also insisted that the pupils should attend school.

The county nurse also visited the school. Dr. DeRose advised the county nurse to continue examining the pupils daily or every other day.

Dr. DeRose left the school about 3:15 p. m. to investigate several cases of scarlet fever in the village.

It is said that there is nothing for the public to be alarmed over and that the cases are not any more serious than encountered in other communities, but it has been deemed expedient to take precautionary measures.

Read the Report

This week the annual town treasurer's report of Frankfort is published in this issue. Read it over and keep it for future reference. It may be valuable sometime.

JOHN MCGLASHEN DIES SUDDENLY OF HEART STROKE

John McGlashen, aged 79 years, well known resident of Frankfort township, died suddenly of a heart attack at the McGlashen cottage east of Frankfort last Friday morning at three o'clock.

Mr. McGlashen was engaged in the box board manufacturing business in Chicago and twenty years ago sold out the business. During the summer months he resided in the cottage on the McGlashen farm east of Frankfort and would spend the winters in California.

Two weeks ago Wednesday he and Mrs. McGlashen returned from Florida where they had been spending the winter and they had intended remaining at their Frankfort home for the summer.

Mr. McGlashen is survived by his widow, three brothers, Duncan of Colorado, Thomas of Joliet and J. R., of Chicago. There were no children.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at the St. Peter's Evangelical church in Frankfort. Rev. G. Gerhold preached the funeral service. Rev. Mr. Herring of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago of which Mr. McGlashen was a member for nineteen years, offered the prayer and read the Scripture. Mr. Gaylord, also of the Institute, read the obituary. The male quartet of the Moody Bible Institute sang.

Burial was made in the Pleasant Hill cemetery at Frankfort.

Orland First Aid Class to Take Exam.

The First Aid Class which the Orland Park Fire Department has been sponsoring under the direction of Mr. Jordon and Mr. Nagle of Chicago Heights has only two more lessons to complete to finish the course. On April 30, the instructors contemplate putting on an interesting drill.

On May 7 an examination of all members of the class will be held. Certificates will be issued to all those who successfully pass this examination. On May 14 the Fire Department is planning to sponsor a party in honor of this class.

The instruction received will be of inestimable value to the Orland Park Fire Department and will be much appreciated in time to come.

"The Big Drive" Coming to Tinley

A thrill of a lifetime awaits all former service men who saw action in the front line trenches in connection with the showing of "The Big Drive" at the Saenger Hall in Tinley Park, Thursday night, April 26 at 8 p. m. The public is especially invited to attend to see just what war really is. This is a talking movie.

A. L. Rule, producer of "The Big Drive" declares that wherever the picture has been shown, all soldiers who saw service overseas instantly recognize familiar scenes and in many instances men have claimed that they were able to recognize themselves and members of their companies.

"The Big Drive" is the best of hundreds of thousands of feet of motion picture film made under actual combat conditions by army photographers of eight different nations which were embroiled in the World War.

Orland Woman's Club Notes

The Orland Park Woman's Club has organized a class in Interior Decoration and Dress Design which will meet in the school auditorium. In order that all may find it convenient to attend there will be a class Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock and at 7 o'clock in the evening.

The Club has secured the services of Miss Lenace Fergus, as instructor and feel very fortunate in being able to find one so capable of doing this line of work.

Miss Fergus is a graduate of the Art Institute and has spent many years in preparation and instructing art classes both in Chicago and New York City.

The course will be divided into 3 parts: First; general decorating and color. Second; household design and garden landscaping. Third; costume design.

All women and girls of high school age are invited to avail themselves of this opportunity for self improvement.

Miss McMahan, Country Life Director, was present at the organization meeting and expressed her pleasure in our undertaking, hoping that she might be able to visit Orland school often in order to be present at the class.

Mokena Has Hot School Election

Mokena took more interest in the local school election Saturday than is usually taken in a general election. In the race for school director, Lawrence Kohl was elected. The vote was as follows:

Dorothy Mau, 63 votes
Lawrence Kohl, 164 votes

On the proposition for the sale of the old school houses in the former Marti district and in Mokena, the vote was overwhelmingly in favor of the sale of these buildings. The vote on this proposition was as follows: For sale of school building at Mokena 218; against 7; for sale of old school in former Marti district now part of the Mokena district 219; against 6.

For director non-high school district Frank Kohlhausen, 100 votes.

Wolf Road Case Postponed Again

On account of attorney A. H. Krusemark being called to Chicago in connection with a case, the hearing on the ownership of a 29 foot strip of land along the Cleveland school in connection with the Wolf road right of way fight, which was to have been heard before Judge Hunter in the Will County Circuit Court Tuesday, has been postponed.

The school trustees of Frankfort township were to have appeared in this hearing. As Mr. Krusemark is representing the county in the Wolf road right of way condemnation suit, the school trustees of Frankfort township have been obliged to engage another attorney to represent them.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

FARMER BROWN'S BOY AND NIMBLE AS FRIENDS

OF ALL the timid people I know of, none is more timid than Nimble Heels, the Jumping Mouse. But a funny thing about very timid people is that often they get over fear easier and more quickly than some who are supposed to be very much braver. It was so with Nimble Heels. Now, wouldn't you suppose that after being almost killed by a great giant who he never had seen before, Nimble Heels would have been frightened almost to death, and remained so? At first he was frightened. Of course. He would have been a funny fellow if he hadn't been.

But it didn't take Nimble Heels long to find out that those hands of Farmer Brown's boy were very gentle hands. Somehow, after a little he liked to be stroked by them. Then he was wrapped in something soft. It was the handkerchief of Farmer Brown's boy. In this he made the longest journey he had ever dreamed of. Clear across the Green Meadows, up the Long Lane, across the farm yard to Farmer Brown's house. There Farmer Brown's boy placed him in the suggest of snug little cages with soft moss for a bed, and left him to himself.

Nimble Heels still felt a little weak, so he buried himself in the soft moss and went to sleep. It was night and quite dark when finally he awoke. At first he couldn't imagine where he was. Then he remembered, and all of a sudden he was all shivery with fear. It was still, very, very still, so at last he found courage to creep out and examine the place where he was. It didn't take him long to discover that he was a prisoner, and a perfect panic of fear swept over him.

The next day, when Farmer Brown's boy came to look at him and see how he was getting along, Nimble Heels wouldn't poke so much as the tip of his nose out from under the moss. Very carefully Farmer Brown's boy uncovered him. When he saw that Nimble Heels was all right he covered him over as he was before and left him. After a while Nimble Heels poked his head out to see what had become of Farmer Brown's boy. No one was to be seen, but there was the most tempting pile of seeds and grain. Nimble Heels suddenly felt hungry.

After that he understood that Farmer Brown's boy would not harm him, but was his protector, and at once they became the best of friends. Always Nimble Heels was sure of finding something especially nice to eat in one of Farmer Brown's boy's pockets.

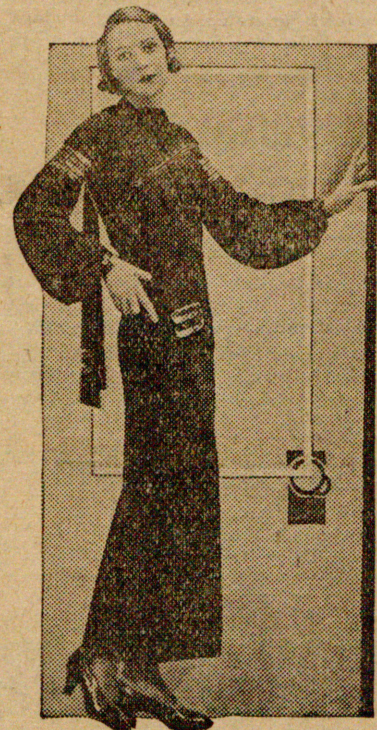

He was safe. He was safer, perhaps, than ever before in all his life. But he was a prisoner. Not even safety could make up for loss of freedom. Nimble Heels began to pine and lose his appetite. Then it was that Farmer Brown's boy showed that he had an understanding heart and was in truth a friend worth having. He took Nimble Heels in his pocket and started down the Long Lane. Out on the Green Meadows he went straight to the very place where Nimble Heels had jumped up his trousers-leg. There he took Nimble Heels from his pocket. Making sure that no enemies were near, he set Nimble Heels down in the grass. From sheer joy in being free once more, Nimble Heels jumped once, twice, three times. And if only he had looked back to see he would have seen the most surprised boy ever.

"Whew! That little chap is some jumper!" exclaimed Farmer Brown's boy, admiringly. It was the first time he had ever seen Nimble Heels jump.

SERVE BANANAS

BANANAS make delightful salads, fruit cocktails, desserts, ices, and may be served as a vegetable. Bananas should be thoroughly ripe if used fresh. Those a bit green will cook nicely and be wholesome.

Baked Bananas.

Strip the skin from the firm yellow fruit, scrape the banana to remove the strings which give an acrid flavor to the fruit. Cut into halves lengthwise, place in a buttered dish and sprinkle with sugar. Pour over six tablespoons of water and bake in a moderate oven until translucent. For six bananas, use six teaspoonsful of sugar (brown is best), with a pinch of salt.

Bananas Baked in Lemon Juice.

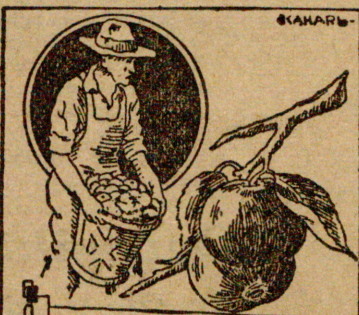

Cut four large bananas into halves lengthwise and put into a baking dish. Peel two large oranges and divide into sections. Add the sections to the top of the bananas. Sift one-half cupful of sugar over the oranges and add one-half cupful of lemon juice with any of the juice left from the oranges. Bake 20 minutes. Serve hot or cold. Very nice with cold meats.

Banana Fritters.

Remove the skins from eight bananas and cut into halves lengthwise, then into quarters. Sprinkle with powdered sugar, one-half tablespoonful of lemon juice and one-half tablespoonful of grated orange rind. Cover and let stand half an hour. Then dip into the following batter and fry in deep fat. Drain on brown paper. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve.

HERE COMES THE BRIDE

By PAUL VANCE

THE little fruit steamer had just arrived from the states—a big event for Port El Sol, where everything is reckoned as "two boats ago" or "three boats from now."

The smelly sun-drenched wharf was a scene of mad activity. Dark-skinned shirtless stevedores sweated and swore as they carried enormous packages of merchandise from the ship to pile on empty flat cars or dump into waiting carts.

In the general office the superintendent of the division, Mike Carew, was busily scanning the pile of letters that had just reached his desk.

He was a lanky young fellow under thirty, with gray eyes which twinkled merrily when not focussed intently on some object under scrutiny.

The letter he was reading seemed to absorb all his thought. Suddenly he looked up, also rising from his chair.

"Hang me for an egg-eating iguana!"

In one swift stride he carried the letter to the auditor's desk, where he slapped it down in front of another young man.

"Read that, Andy—and weep," he commanded.

"What's he done now?" queried Andy Benton, as his quick eye scanned the sheets in a familiar bold hand.

"Got married," answered Mike, curtly, much as if saying, "He's dead."

Andy picked up the letter for a careful reading.

He was a big man about Mike's age, with a mop of fine red hair and sea-blue eyes.

A whimsical smile wreathed his face as he finished.

"So that's why he was in such a hurry to get away!"

"Yep," returned Mike. "He did it with malice aforethought. Let's see, when does he say he's coming back?"

Andy consulted the letter.

"In about three boats—Joe, the sheik. I knew he'd fall sometime."

"Well, he's pulled a fast one on us, anyway. I suppose he figures we've forgotten all the tricks he's played us before. Say!"—Mike brightened. "Let's write him a letter that'll shoot a little worry into him. It's our only chance to break even with him."

"Fine! The girl won't need to know anything about it, and maybe young Joe will do a bit of wholesome sweating."

As soon as office tasks permitted, Mike fell to work on the letter.

He remembered how this same gentleman Joe had quickly revealed himself as an incurable practical joker whose supreme pleasure it was to turn the tricks on his two close pals, so that eternal vigilance became the price of peace for them. And yet, Mike recalled, Joe hadn't been from Port Sol three days before he himself had lamented to his fellow-in-bereavement, "Andy, Joe's as necessary to us as fleas to a dog."

And Andy had answered, "Yes, we're miserable when he's here and wretched when he's away. He sort of makes us forget what a hole this is."

Thought and emotion in a fine blend wrought the letter which soon went forth addressed to Mr. Joseph Rogers, absent on leave in the United States. A few excerpts will suggest the character of the whole.

There'll be a red-hot reception committee waiting for you at the dock, all right. There's Dolores, the commandante's niece for one. Says you promised to marry her at the Baile de Independencia. Her lawyer-father claims that a promise made under the influence of champagne is binding. They will be there with all the necessary papers. Then little Margarita Ochoa says you asked her the same thing the same night. She will be there with that killer-brother, Ochoa Hernandez. He says he doesn't need any papers. I've been training that bunch of half-breed kids you always play Santa Claus to so that they'll shout "Papacito! Papacito!" when you start down the gang plank.

My advice would be for you to leave the wife in the states and come down yourself a boat or two ahead, just to get things kind of cleaned up. There are no company houses vacant and the G. M. says you will have to stay in the Paris hotel. A lousy place to spend your honeymoon.

Mike signed the letter with a grand flourish, and they mailed it together in high glee.

Little Joe was slated to worry—and how!

Another steamer-day arrived. Once more the remote port buzzed with activity. Make sat at his desk scanning the fresh mail. Suddenly he seized one envelope then ripped it open eagerly, but his look of keen anticipation changed to one of consternation which, as he read on, deepened almost to terror.

"Well, am I a bob-tailed olingo!" he moaned.

"What happened?"

Andy came over.

Mike weakly held out the sheet of robin's egg blue stationery covered with feminine script.

"Read it—and prepare for the hereafter," he counseled darkly.

Andy read, and then laid the letter back on Mike's desk as gently as if it had been a stick of dynamite.

"Gad, what a woman! Looks like you'd put your foot in it this time, Mike."

"Say!" shouted Mike, enraged by the holier-than-thou accent in his tone.

"Where do you get that you-stuff? Didn't you help write that letter?"

"You signed it," said Andy. "I wash my hands of the whole affair."

"Oh, yeah! And who said she was made outa star-dust—that her eyes had cabbaged the moonbeams?"

"I was only quoting from Joe's letter, as you are entirely aware."

"Well, Joe must have been drunk on tiger's blood. Say, Andy, can't you just picture the kind of forget-me-not of the angels she is? Tall and bony, wears specs, and has shark's eyes. One of those women that gobble at you like a turkey instead of swearing."

Mike gingerly picked up the letter and read it again with interpolations of his own.

"Sir:—

Your abominable letter addressed to my beloved husband, Joseph Rogers, by a happy coincidence fell into my hands." (Yeah, fell is the word, all right. I'll bet your octopaglan tentacles search every pocket he has)

"If your intentions were as nefarious as this letter would lead one to believe, then fate was indeed kind to me in placing it in my hands." (Fate, and who else?) "It is evident that you are trying to separate two tender hearts whom God hath joined together."

"(The Almighty would have to hogle me, old gal—um-m—let's see how she winds up—)

"Unless you persist in your attempt to cause trouble between us, I shall never show this letter to my dear husband, who has always spoken of you in the highest terms of affection and esteem."

I am, Sir,

MRS. JOS. ROGERS."

A tight feeling caught Mike in the throat. If only the letter had reached Joe first, as intended, he would have read between the lines. But now—what a chance for friendly festivity!

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rogers arrived two boats later. If his job had not required it, Mike would never have gone down to meet that boat. But as it was, he steered clear of the promenade deck where the passengers were congregated. Only once did he catch a glimpse of Joe and a tall straight female.

As he dodged down a companion-way Joe spied him with a bunch of officials up forward and pounced on him like a hawk on a chicken. Without a "by your leave" to the astonished officials, he dragged him aft.

"Here he is, Myra!" he shouted.

Mike chilled at the note of triumph in his voice, but decided to make the best of an awkward situation.

As yet he had seen only the bride's back, but Joe's last mighty shove forced him through the circle around her and placed him practically at her side. She turned to receive him.

Mike tried to speak, but could only gasp. He stood gaping at the slender, blue-eyed woman who was Joe's wife.

"Kiss the bride, you old pirate," ordered Joe as he drew them together. As Mike remained in a daze, he whispered, "Old dumb-bell, I wrote the letter. She knows nothing about it."

Just then Andy loomed up for his tenth look at the bride.

"Say. You two pikers," Joe called. "Where's the reception committee?"

Mike had to grin. Andy grinned sheepishly back. Again Joe had made them feel miserable and wretched for two weeks—and they still liked him.

Coral Island Group a Menace to Navigation

A group of islands in the China sea, over which it is reported the Japanese may dispute French possession, are so tiny and unimportant that many map makers do not show them, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"The group of seven coral islands, reported to include Taitu and Twin Islands, lies approximately 300 miles northwest of Palawan island of the Philippines, and can best be located by drawing a line due east from a point a few miles north of Saigon, French Indo-China, and a line due south from Hongkong, China, continues the bulletin. The lines will intersect close to the islands.

"Perhaps more attention is given to the islands by the navigation chart makers that world map guides, for these and other islands in the southern part of the China sea long have been a menace to navigation. Not far east of the group is a vast area of the sea which hydrographic maps show as 'dangerous,' for it has not been surveyed.

"According to the Japanese government, a colony of Japanese once inhabited some of the islands.

"Today the islands are deserted except for a few Chinese fishermen who are provided with food by junks which visit this region once or twice a year.

"Palawan, the nearest permanently settled area to the islands, belongs to the Philippine islands group. It is slightly larger than the state of Delaware. The 25,000 inhabitants of Palawan are almost wholly Mohammedan Moros, descended from early Arab adventurers."

That Body of Yours

By

JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

Dangers of Underv eight

WHILE most individuals whose weight is not within normal limits, are carrying too much weight, with the ailments which so often accompany it, nevertheless there are a number of underweights who have considerable physical distress and do not realize that underweight is the cause of this distress.

When a meal is eaten the underweight individual immediately becomes conscious of this meal; it feels heavy. Any change of position of the body increases this sense of weight and in some cases actually causes pain.

Usually the stomach hangs down too low, as there is no fat to help support it, thus it cannot empty its contents into the small intestine so readily. With some of the food remaining in the stomach when the next meal is eaten, indigestion with gas pressure pains may follow.

Naturally with the weight of meals causing discomfort, and the slowness of the emptying of the stomach causing further discomfort and pain, the individual is inclined to eat even less food than he needs and continues to lose weight.

A few years ago operations were performed to hold up the stomach and other organs that were hanging too low in the abdomen. Operations are not as frequent now as more scientific methods are being used to fatten up these very thin individuals.

They are encouraged to eat the more concentrated foods such as butter, cream, fat meat, eggs, and to sit down and rest for a few minutes after each meal.

Comfortable abdominal belts are worn which permit natural breathing, yet hold up the abdomen and its contents. This removes the "draggy" feeling, and so helps the stomach and intestine that when they squeeze or contract their contents, these contents are carried along their course without having any high hills to climb.

In order that all the food will be out of the stomach before the next meal is eaten, these thin individuals whenever possible, lie on the right side for fifteen minutes just before lunch and before dinner. By lying on the right side, any food in the stomach will flow down into the small intestine, leaving the stomach clear and ready for the next meal.

There are severe cases where the stomach or other organs may have to be fastened up by operation.

The Research Worker

IT IS certainly gratifying to the medical profession and to all others who give the matter thought, to see grateful patients recognize the difficulties of research workers and endeavor to give them some financial aid.

Thus, in England, a group of asthma sufferers have completed an organization to aid research physicians who are doing work on the cause and relief of asthma.

H. G. Wells, the author, has invited his fellow sufferers with diabetes to follow the example of the asthma sufferers, and help all workers and institutions spending their time on diabetes.

He points out that, thanks to a regulated diet and to insulin, they are living active, happy lives, while a few years ago many "would have been un comfortable and dying slowly or already dead but for the work of a small group of experimenters and practitioners who have brought this particular maladjustment or disease under control."

Mr. Wells says that diabetics, now financially able to do so, should not only help these research workers but help also those diabetics who are not well enough off to get the diet and insulin treatment. In other words diabetics in good or fair circumstances should tax themselves for the benefit of all diabetics.

When we remember the years devoted to the dietetic control of diabetes by Joslin of Boston and others, then the work done by Banting and Best, discoverers of insulin, in Toronto, under the most trying circumstances, with the final refining process of insulin developed by Collip, we can get some idea of the patience and perseverance of practitioners and research men.

As you know, if these men were paid for the lives saved, it would run into many millions of dollars, aside from the happiness achieved and suffering relieved.

All that research men ask, in fact, they do not ask for anything; all they would like is that they be supplied with a place and equipment with which to work, and enough to live on, and they are willing to give themselves to the relief of the ills of humanity. In fact, many of them are doing this without proper equipment, and without resources to actually support themselves.

You'll agree that Mr. Wells has done a good piece of work in calling the attention of his fellow sufferers to the need of helping the cause of all diabetics.

Idioms Used to Build Up English Language

A savage tribe in Tierra del Fuego has a vocabulary of 30,000 words and are the only savages in the world so richly supplied. We might borrow a few and they'd never be missed. We thus appropriated "hooch" from the Alaska Indians and have much enjoyed using it; that is, using the word. Hooch is a phonetic joy. It has that wild and slightly vulgar sound that seems to fit a crude intoxicant. English-speaking peoples are quick to pick up words odd to the ears from their neighbors, giving them a twist that may make their utterance more or less comic. "Hoosegow," made over from the Spanish "huskado," provokes a laugh. The English in India soon appropriated "loot"; and "bulldoze" arose out of the swamps of Louisiana, where it was for long a neglected verb derived from the French. Other terms that spring into being in the under-world in time get fairly into good society by succeeding gradations, and there are now in good standing some from the patois of the pirates of the Spanish Main.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

It Never Has Paid

Crime is caused by ignorance—ignorance of common sense.

THE OLDEST PROFESSION

Three professional men, a doctor, an engineer, and a financier, were debating which of them belonged to the most honorable and ancient profession.

The doctor said: "Mine is easily the oldest. Don't you remember that in the beginning Eve was made out of a rib in Adam's side? Well, there's a surgical operation for you."

The engineer said: "Yes, but before that happened don't you know the whole world was made out of chaos in six days? Now, there's an engineering feat for you."

"Ah," said the financier, "but who made chaos?"—Public Opinion.

"Two things I wanted—

"...and it was all so simple when I found out my trouble. My physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-glo-bin in the blood.

"The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, pimply skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin.

"It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal—and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up."

If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.

S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Sold by all drug stores...in two convenient sizes...the larger is more economical.

HOMER

By Mrs. Fred Kopelman
Will Kasper, Jr. has been detained from his school duties the past week by illness.

At the recent primary, Maurice Paddock won the election for precinct committeeman on the Republican ticket and Jack Donahue on the Democratic ticket.

Dont forget to come to the Marley church Friday night, April 20, and see "The Little Clodhopper" a three act comedy drama, which is to be presented by the Homer Dramatic club. The cast of characters is as follows: Miss Julietta Bean, a comedy old maid, Elizabeth Anderson; Mrs. Chigerson Boggs, a designing society woman, Hattie Cagwin; Judy, the Little Clodhopper from the poorhouse, Mildred Burch; Charmain, a movie actress, Verna Paddock; Cey Gump, a fresh country product, Angelo Depra; Septimus Green, book agent, Eugene Anderson and George Chigerson, a city dandy, Owen Storm. Then, too, the "Orchestra" composed of June Milton, Evelyn Kopelman, Pearl Rodgers, Anna Burch, Florence Anderson, Henry Rodgers, Gerald Hewitt, Owen Ott and Robert Burch, add much to the entertainment.

Harold Hewitt, who has been employed with the C.C.C. works in Washington the past six months, has returned to the home of his parents here.

School elections were held in the various schools in Homer, Merritt Cagwin was re-elected at the Barnett school, Otto Konow at Wells Corner school, Robert Jungles at the Ross school, Harry Peterson at the Hadley school.

Joseph Miller, who has been very ill, has recovered and resumed his duties at the E.J. & E. yards in Joliet. Saturday night, April 21, the M. W. A. Hall Co., will sponsor a dance at their hall in Goodings Grove. Joe Mosele and his boys will furnish the music.

The Old Time Dance, which was held last Saturday night was a big success and drew a crowd from Mokena, Frankfort, Joliet, Blue Island, New Lenox, Lockport and Lemont.

Mrs. Wm. Parish of Lockport, is spending this week with her daughter Mrs. Peter Hommerding, Mrs. Parish had an unfortunate accident last week when she smashed her finger badly, Dr. North dressed the wound which was very painful.

Emily Anderson is spending the weekend with a friend in Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Effner of Joliet were guests at the Fred Kopelman home Sunday.

Otto Konow, who has been visiting at the Iver Olson home in Minnesota the past two weeks, returned home Saturday.

Wallace Morrison underwent a very serious operation at the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet, Wednesday.

Albert Kempf was entertained at the home of Mrs. Lucinda Butcher in Lockport, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt and little daughter motored to Aurora Sunday to visit with relatives.

Margaret Welter, Eloise Welter and Jennie Vitato, Homer students at the Lockport Township High School were selected from the Glee Club to compete in a chorus of 16 voices at the annual musical contest at the college in DeKalb, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Milne accompanied the young people on their trip. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Herbst and son of Joliet spent the weekend with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Welter.

The monthly meeting of the R. N. A. Camp in Goodings Grove will be held Thursday afternoon. After the business, the afternoon will be devoted to bunco.

The scarlet fever quarantine has been removed from the Willard Rowley home and the children resumed their school duties Monday.

The quarantine has also been raised at the Herbert Corp home where the older son, Robert has had scarlet fever. Walter Corp, the younger son, who has been living with his grandmother during the quarantine, returned home Tuesday.

The Woman's Community Club was entertained at the home of Mrs. Harry Parker Wednesday afternoon.

Homer township tax books are now in possession of Township Collector Peter Koniek, who has completed arrangements for the annual collection.

The annual Congregational Church Association meeting was held in Aurora Thursday afternoon and evening. Miss Lillian Picken, of Satura, India, who has been at work in that country under the American board of commissioners, foreign missions for the past 19 years, was the guest speaker.

Rev. Jay of Lockport, conducted services at the Homer Congregational church Sunday evening. After this service the Dramatic Club held a short business meeting.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor Society will meet in the church parlors next Sunday at 7:30. Jerome Paddock will conduct the services.

ORLAND PARK

The local child welfare clinic held at the Orland Park public school auditorium Wednesday afternoon was quite well attended and the mothers showed much interest in the clinic.

James Creer, our popular school director and merchant is wearing a happy smile and the reason is, that he is the proud daddy of a lusty son born Tuesday morning at the Silver Cross hospital Joliet. Mother and son are doing nicely.

The card and bunco party sponsored by the Orland Park high school students at the school auditorium last Tuesday night, was well attended and about $53 was realized by the students.

A chop suey supper will be held by the Ladies of the Christ Lutheran church at the Lutheran school April 26th from 5 to 8 p. m. Everyone is welcome.

Born on April 4th to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rahm, a son.

The state has had a force of men busy the past few weeks planting trees alongside of the Southwest Highway and Route 51. The trees have been planted on both sides of the Highway as part of a highway beautifying project.

Last Friday was Arbor Day and a number of trees were planted in the Orland Park public school yard. Among them was a prize winning American Elm purchased from the Palos Park Nursery who are noted for their choice stock.

The Orland Park school election held last Saturday was a very quiet affair. Mrs. H. Adele Cooper, whose term as school director had expired did not seek re-election. Mrs. Helen Gee was elected in her place, receiving 16 votes. Mrs. Cooper, although not a candidate received 6 votes. Mrs. Cooper has rendered very efficient service during her term of office.

The P. T. A. meeting held last Thursday night at the school auditorium was quite well attended. Vernon Bouyer of Chicago was the chief speaker of the evening. His subject was taxation. Royal Glahn sang a solo, entitled, "The Green Eyed Dragon" and played a violin solo entitled, "Oriental". Mrs. H. Adele Cooper, played a piano selection entitled, "La Gazelle."

Mr. Bouyer is connected with the C. W. E. S. of Chicago. The Royal Neighbors will conduct a card and bunco party at the Legion Hall, April 20.

Miss Adele Schmadeke and brother Marvin are ill with scarlet fever.

The CWA workers who have been connected with the CWA gang under the management of Wm. Beagley, Jr., and Harold Wymer, held a fish dinner at the Louis Raschke place Friday night and all enjoyed a delightful time and excellent dinner for which Raschke's is noted.

A number of Orland Park men have secured employment in an automobile crank shaft factory in Harvey.

ORLAND PARK SCHOOL NEWS

Friday April 13, the pupils of the Orland School celebrated Arbor Day by planting three trees on the school grounds, with appropriate ceremonies. Miss McMahon was present and put in the first shovel of dirt on the American Elm. Charlyn Knox read the Governor's Proclamation, poems were recited by Marion Peters and Bobby Toehe.

Hagenbeck-Wallace
Circus Opens In Chicago, April 21

The circus is coming—the Great Hagenbeck-Wallace—and, aside from its annual role as the harbinger of spring, the big show opens in the Coliseum, Chicago, Saturday April 21st, with its greatest of programs.

Yes, this time the circus comes to Chicago for 16 days, the last two performances being on Sunday, May 6th, and it comes with a twofold significance for it not only brings scores of the world's best acts and displays, new to Chicago, but it marks the return, after a lapse of eight years, of the old fashioned circus street parade.

This most welcome feature will be presented for the first time on Friday night, April 20th as the inaugural event of the Coliseum engagement, and is to be an illuminated street pageant through the downtown loop streets. Over a mile and one half of mounted folk, several bands, dozens upon dozens of open cages and dens filled with jungle beasts, and all else that goes to make up a real circus parade, is promised. Only the one parade will be presented during the Chicago engagement.

"Just look at this extra room we have in the basement now, and it's all due to gas heat," says Mrs. Heinekamp.

What Others Say About Gas Heat:

"Hauling ashes used to be my Saturday afternoon job. Now with gas heat I have more time to myself. Besides I don't have to get up at daybreak to shovel coal and stoke the furnace."

William J. Masoner
647 N. Cuyler Ave., Oak Park, Ill.

"Considering all conditions, including the cleanliness of gas heat, thus reducing cleaning and redecorating expense, I consider gas heat the most satisfactory for my home."

R. S. Jackson, 9145 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

"Fine, I like it (gas heat) better than any way I have ever heated before, and I have heated my houses in many different ways."

Mrs. Robert P. Bazner
4034 West 21st St., Chicago, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Heinekamp enjoy many leisure hours in this attractive basement room, made possible by gas heat.

JUST look at this attractive basement in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Heinekamp—and think what you, too, could do with your basement if you had gas heat installed! "Imagine! This used to be the coal bin," says Mrs. Heinekamp. "But now it's just as clean as any other room in the house. And it's really amazing how little it cost to fix up this room. There are so many nice things about gas heat. There's no worry about the furnace, no coal to shovel, no ashes to haul out. Getting rid of all that soot and dirt is a blessing."

Thousands switching as gas heat rates go down

Imagine your home free from soot, dust, dirt and furnace drudgery! Imagine getting just the temperatures you want, night and day, by adjusting a little thermostat on the wall. Why put up with furnace worries any longer, when rates for gas heat are so low! Think of it—rates for heating homes with gas are now only half of what they were during the 1930-31 heating season.

And—you can try gas heat without investing one cent! We will install a burner in your present furnace or boiler at our expense. You pay only the rental on the equipment, which amounts to $3 a month in the average home. This charge is included in the bill for the gas you use. You try it for a month, two months, a year. And if within the year you find that you are not completely satisfied with gas, we will take it out at our expense and replace your former heating equipment in good workmanlike order. But—if you decide to keep gas heat—as we think you will—the rental you have paid applies on the purchase price of the equipment.

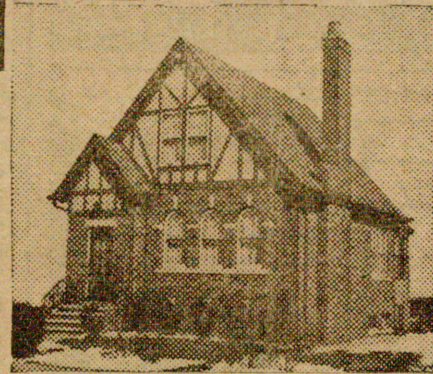

Act now!

Don't delay! It is pure folly not to investigate this liberal offer on gas heat when it brings so many marvelous comforts and conveniences. Call your local gas company today for full information.

Gas heat can be installed in your home without allowing your house to cool off

Gas Heating Division

PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY OF NORTHERN ILLINOIS

The Heinekamp home at 923 Manchester Avenue, Westchester, Illinois—just one of more than 20,000 homes in the Chicago area which have installed gas heat.

STARTLING TRIAL OFFER!

To prove that every home can afford to heat with gas, we'll install it at our expense . . . and remove it at our expense, if you don't like it.

YOU INVEST NOTHING!

Without ONE CENT of investment by you, we install the most modern burner in your furnace or boiler. If you are satisfied, it stays. If not—and you are the sole judge—our it comes and your former heating system is re-installed—AT OUR EXPENSE. We make this offer because of our confidence in the perfection of gas heat.

You never have to order gas

You never have to order gas—it is always under orders to serve you.

Morning, noon, and night it is at your command. Should you fail to stock your tank for the week-end, or should extra company visit you unexpectedly, you might have to scurry around to meet unforeseen demands.

Not so with gas. Public Service Company of Northern Illinois has learned to anticipate your demands for fuel and how to meet them. For many of its employees, Sundays and holidays mean days devoted to your service. Day in and day out, through rain, sleet and snow, these workers are busy in order that an unending supply of gas flows to you instantly at your command.

WEAR A BUDDY POPPY ON

MEMORIAL DAY

Arthur C. Schiller

Publicity Chairman

"When poppies splash their heart's bright red blood

As round your cross they dance,

And Norman apple blossoms blow,

It must be spring in France."

In these words a great poet gives utterance to the deep poignancy of meaning which the coming of spring brings to every American. Each year the poppies bloom again in the fields of France, those blossoms whose scarlet petals were a symbol of high courage, as "with their poppies in their helmets, the front files held the line."

And now each year, thru all America, other poppies bloom, touching

"the mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battlefield, and patriotic grave, to every living heart and hearthstone, all over this broad land."

These poppies are also a symbol of courage, the courage of those fighting men who returned disabled to face an impaired existence. "Over the Top!" The words were filled with significance for our valiant troops when they were fighting the battles of democracy in far-off trenches. The words have a new significance now for many of these same brave lads, handicapped by war's aftermath, who are making the millions of Buddy

Poppies which all America wears on

Memorial Day.

"Over the top again" with a record breaking sale of these tiny memorial emblems is the goal which these disabled and needy veterans have set for themselves in the thirteenth annual distribution conducted by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States to raise funds for relief work.

Never has the need for these relief funds been so desperate. Every cent which can be obtained thru this year's sale of Buddy Poppies is great ly and immediately needed for the care of sick and disabled veterans; for family relief work among the dependants of unemployed or deceased veterans; for the maintenance of the

V. F. W. National Home at Eator

Rapids, Michigan, where the widows and orphans of former service men are cared for by our organization.

A little more than a year ago,

thousands of Aehrican veterans were receiving small monthly allowances from a grateful government which thus did what it could to make up to these victims of war, for sacrifices they so gladly and generously had made. Then the Economy Act of March 20, 1933, was passed. Hasty, ill-considered, backed by false promises and deliberate mis-statements of fact on the part of anti-veteran forces, that Act, within a few months,

cut more than half a million disabled veterans from our national pension and compensation rolls.

Mark you, Congress previously had adjudged those cases service connected--had allowed those pensions after long and careful consideration of the entire veteran problem. Then a new Congress, with virtually no consideration of

Our Pet Peeve—

ONE FOR S. P. C. A.

"My husband is a brute, and I've reached the place where I just can't stand him any longer," said Mrs. Nosey.

"Now what's he done?" asked her dearest friend.

"Well, you know we were on a 4-party line, and he's gone and had it replaced with a private one, so I can't listen in any more," she groaned.

Matches

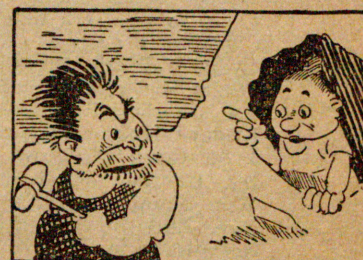

The physician was giving an informal talk on physiology. "Also," he remarked, "it has recently been found that the human body contains sulphur."

"Sulphur!" exclaimed the girl in the blue-and-white blazer. "And how much sulphur is there, then, in a girl's body?"

"Oh, the amount varies," said the doctor, smiling.

"Ah!" returned the girl. "And is that why some of us make better matches than others?"—Vancouver Province.

BUSINESSLIKE

Mrs. Stonehammer—Johnny Bonechisel says he considers our daughter worth her weight in clam shells. Mr. S.—That's fine I'll hold him off a few weeks while we fatten her up.

Not the Same Thing

"Darling," she murmured, and her voice was shaky, "how do I know that you really and truly love me?" "My pet, I can prove it," he said. "Why, I can't sleep at nights for thinking of you." "H'm," she muttered doubtfully, "that's no proof. Pa can't sleep at nights for thinking of you, but I hardly think it's love."

Right Size

McPherson was to be married. "Ye'll be given us a send-off?" he inquired of his best man. "We will." "With rice and white ribbons?" "Aye." "And old shoes thrown after us?" "Oh, aye, of course." "Well—I wear tens, an' Janet takes sizes."

Bad Eye

Gladys—Mother, dear, I advertised under a different name that I would like to make the acquaintance of a refined gentleman with an eye to romance. Mother—Gladys, how awful! Did you get any answers? Gladys—Only one—from father.—Kitchener Record.

Fleeing Time

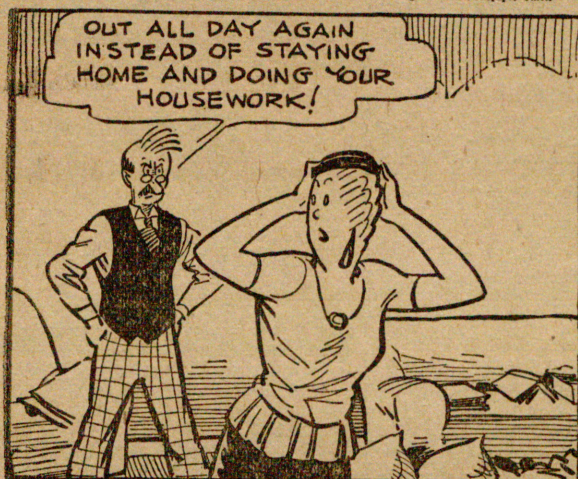

Lecturer (who has spoken for two hours)—I shall not keep you much longer. I am afraid I have spoken at rather great length. There is no clock in the room, and I must apologize for not having a watch with me. A Voice—There's a calendar behind you, mister!—Exchange.

Strange Procedure

First Fraternity Man—Say, Jim, I wonder if I could borrow that blue necktie of yours? Second Loafer—What's the matter, couldn't you find it?

The WEDDING MARCH MURDER

SYNOPSIS

Waiting in the minister's study, Jim Franklin, about to be married to Doris Carmody, is stabbed to death. Peter Cardigan, with Sergeant Kilday, begins the investigation. Franklin, while waiting, had visitors, among them his mistress, "Choo Choo" Train; his intended wife's father, Ambrose Carmody; her brother, Rylie; Daniel Bulfinch, politician, and a woman in a blue frock. Rylie Carmody admits trying to stop the wedding, after being informed by Webster Spears that Franklin was still friendly with Choo Choo. Despite his approaching marriage, Kilday secures the dead man's keys. From Callis Shipley, one of the bridesmaids, Rylie's friend, the investigators learn nothing. An interview with Bulfinch is fruitless. Webster Spears admits informing Rylie Carmody of Franklin's relations with Choo Choo, for Doris Carmody's sake, in the hope of preventing the wedding. Fletcher, Franklin's man-servant, is reticent. An interview with Milla Dunbar, Franklin's law partner, and search of the dead man's office, reveals nothing of importance. Choo Choo admits her relations with Franklin were to continue after his marriage. Six of the seven keys Franklin carried are traced. Kilday decides to follow Webster Spears and have Rylie Carmody shadowed. Callis Shipley vainly tries to convince Cardigan of the innocence of Rylie Carmody and Spears. She and Rylie plan to leave the city, evading Rylie's shadower.

"I don't want to think!" When he turned to face her Rylie's tortured expression revealed his inner agony. "Web and I have been like brothers. He loved Doris. If he killed Jim Franklin, he did no more than I might have done, had I been given the opportunity."

"Oh, Rylie! He couldn't have done it! Not Web!"

And when he made no answer, she added, "All the more reason we should stand by him, then. We can't desert him now."

"It isn't deserting him," retorted the boy sharply. "Father will see to his defense. Everything that friends and money can do, will be done for him. We'll all stand by him. But remaining here won't help us. Why, he'd be the first to advise us to go, if he knew."

"They'd follow us wherever we went," the girl objected.

"It's easier than you think, honey," he glanced at his watch. "Three-fifty-five. Call Flo and tell her we're coming. In the meantime I promise to lose my shadow. Once out of town, they'll never find us."

Callis walked to the window and watched the loitering detective across the street. Apparently the man was engrossed in the newspaper he was reading.

Rylie peered over her shoulder. The taxi waited, conveniently, half a block up the street. He had grown familiar with the man's methods. When Rylie appeared at the door, the taxicab got slowly under way, so as to be nearly abreast of the waiting detective by the time the young man could reach his car. The detective invariably continued his perusal of the newspaper, apparently taking no notice of the proceedings. Once he was in his car, however, Rylie always noticed the sleuth was close at his heels. This procedure had never varied.

The young man rumbled his hair thoughtfully. "I know how to get rid of him," he began, surveying the stubby hood of the taxicab critically. "I could run away from that car in second, once we got out of the city. Suppose I take him out into the country and lose him. If they question me about it later, I only need to say I didn't even know I was being followed."

"They might watch here and pick up your trail when you come back."

"I wouldn't need to come back." Rylie's confidence was rising now. He smiled boyishly. "They aren't following you. As soon as I leave, call up Flo and tell her we're coming. Then catch the first train for Westport. In the meantime, I'll lose the detective and meet you there at seven o'clock. Give me plenty of time, because I'll be miles from there when I give that fellow the shake. I won't take any chances of his finding us again, after I meet you."

Callis waited two days. After the worry of the past two days, the lazy peace of Martin's Cove was more than ever inviting. And if Rylie were there—Rylie, without detectives dogging his footsteps. She glanced again at the waiting sleuth across the street. What if he had overheard Rylie's bitter remarks concerning Jim Franklin a few minutes ago? Coupled with the suspicion with which he was already regarded, that might have been enough to cause his arrest. It might be better if they did go away for a few days.

"All right," she decided at length. "I'll do it. But first I must see Mr. Cardigan. Perhaps he can help Web."

"Cardigan? What are you thinking of, Callis? He's that detective fellow."

"He isn't a detective, Rylie. At least, not a police detective. He's the man who writes those detective stories. Don't you remember how full the newspapers were of his exploits last summer when he solved the murder of Lila Vale after the police had failed? If Web is innocent, he could help us by finding the real murderer."

"Yes, and if Web is guilty, he'd probably help send him to the electric chair," added Rylie grimly. "Don't go to him, Callis. I'm afraid it would only make things worse."

side before she would agree to drive to Martin's Cove. The only change this required in Rylie's original plan was a later meeting at Westport. It was agreed that Callis should meet him there at nine o'clock.

Rylie lost no time in putting his part of the plan into execution. With the detective's taxicab following, he headed, by the shortest route, for the country. He felt confident of success. He halted at a gas station and filled his tank. The taxicab stopped at the drug store across the street. He already knew what he would do. An open road, with the accelerator pressed to the floor. Wind singing in his ears, and the taxicab dropped farther and farther behind, until it was lost from view. Then a side-road, and a second one, twisting and curving until there was no possibility of finding his trail.

Callis had several hours until she was to meet Rylie at Westport. She telephoned Flo and packed her bag herself, striving all the while to keep her thoughts away from Rylie. She couldn't. What if something went wrong? What if the very fact that he had given their detective the slip intensified the suspicions that were already directed at him? Now that he was gone, the plan seemed very foolish to her and she regretted the decision she had made. But it was too late now. Rylie was already gone. There would be no way to get in touch with him until she reached Westport. She was tempted to phone Flo again and tell her they had changed their plans. If they returned home this evening perhaps nothing would be thought of the incident of the afternoon.

She was still undecided when she reached Cardigan's apartment. If he would only help, surely there was some way to prove Web's innocence.

"I Think That Girl Has Warped Your Judgment, Peter."

Web couldn't be a murderer! It was unthinkable! She clung to that thought throughout her brief interview with the novelist. It steered her to meet the evident suspicion with which he greeted her visit. There was a time when she thought he believed her, when she was tempted to hope that he might offer his help. But the moment vanished, and when she left, it was with the hopeless conviction that she could do nothing more. Peter Cardigan was definitely on the other side.

It seemed to her that it took far longer than the scheduled hour for the train to reach Westport. Time dragged interminably. Yet it was only a quarter of nine when she arrived. She had half hoped that Rylie would be there ahead of her, waiting, but he wasn't. But it wouldn't be long. He was always very punctual. She waited on the platform, her restless eyes seeking out the lights of each passing motor car, as she heard its approach. The minutes ticked slowly past, and still he did not come.

Nine-fifteen—nine-thirty—the hands of her watch seemed almost to have stopped, and still Rylie was missing. In her anxiety, she conjured up fearful pictures of what might have happened to him. A wreck! Rylie, lying under a twisted mass of metal, his white face drawn with pain. Or arrested? Facing the grilling examination of Sergeant Kilday. Perhaps they had discovered he was trying to run away. She walked restlessly up and down the dimly lighted platform, striving vainly to thrust aside the turmoil of her thoughts. Back and forth, she trudged the platform. It seemed that her steps were as slow as the dragging time. Where was Rylie? What had happened to him? Why didn't he come?

CHAPTER X

A Fresh Trail

The memory of Callis Shipley's agonized expression when he refused his assistance tortured Peter after she had departed. Perhaps if she had made that appeal to him at first, before he had detected her in two efforts to deceive him, he might have enlisted in her cause. Not now. The very admiration which had almost betrayed him into a blind belief in her had also made him wary. He felt that possibly she was acting a role; that this might, in some manner, fit into the chain of her other deceptions in a subtly calculated effort to make him serve her own interests, whatever they might be. Grudgingly, he admitted to himself that his instinct had been to offer her his assistance. He almost wished he had called her back and made such a promise. Her argument as to Rylie's innocence had appealed to his sense of reason. Her defense of Spears had coincided, in a measure, with his doubt that the latter could have grasped the knife that ended Franklin's life from its position high on the wall of the rector's study.

His reverie was interrupted by the sharp jangle of the telephone. It was Sergeant Kilday calling.

"Grab a taxi and come on over here," he urged. "I'm at Franklin's apartment."

"Has anything happened?"

"Some one has broken into the apartment. But come on over, I tell you. You can see for yourself."

It was as Kilday had said. During the late afternoon, Fletcher had been absent on some errands. He had been gone about two hours. When he returned, he had found the apartment topsyturvy, the rugs thrown back, the drawers pulled out, the closets ransacked. He had, of course, immediately notified the police.

"Have you discovered what is missing?" Kilday was asking when Peter arrived.

"Everything is so torn up, I don't know," the servant replied dubiously. "I can't think what the burglars were after. There was no money in the house. What little jewelry Mr. Franklin had, shirt studs, a watch and one ring, was not taken. There was no silver of any consequence. Mr. Franklin seldom took his meals here."

A cursory examination could reveal nothing missing. It was apparent that the burglar, whoever it may have been, had searched every corner of the apartment thoroughly. Whatever he had sought had been well concealed, if it were here at all. This was evidenced by the confusion evident in every room.

"Now what," asked Kilday, "was he after? It wasn't money. If it had been an ordinary prowler he would have taken that jewelry. There isn't much of it, but it's of considerable value. And if it wasn't money, what was it and how does this fit in with the murder?"

He surveyed the wreckage grimly. His first effort, after his arrival, had been to find fingerprints, and although an assistant had made a thorough search, only one set had been found. These had quickly been identified as having been made by Fletcher. The rooms had been dusted thoroughly that morning and, with the exception of the unknown visitor who had left no marks, there had been no one but Fletcher in the apartment since.

"One thing is certain," declared Peter. "It couldn't have been Webster Spears. He was already under arrest." "It wasn't Rylie Carmody either," the detective added dubiously. "If he had tried anything like this, we'd have had a report from the man who's shadowing him. That leaves the Shipley girl. If this had any connection with the murder, it was she who searched this apartment. But why? What was she after?"

Peter turned to the servant with quickened interest. "What time was it when you left the apartment, Fletcher?"

"I can't tell you exactly, sir. Probably about four-thirty."

"And when did you return?"

"It was a quarter to seven. I had dinner while I was out. There was nothing in the house."

Could it have been Callis Shipley, Peter wondered? Certainly it had been fully five-thirty when she left his apartment, probably later. He tried in vain to think of some circumstance which would help him estimate the hour of her visit. Aside from the fact that he remembered turning on the reading lamp when she arrived, there was no way he could accurately check the time. His library windows opened toward the east, on a narrow canyon of street bordered by high apartment buildings, where dusk crept in early. For Kilday's benefit he related the circumstances of that visit. "I don't think it could have been the girl," he concluded. "This search took time. She was with me at least part of the time Fletcher was away."

The detective chewed reflectively upon his frayed cigar. "Perhaps this didn't have anything to do with the murder, after all," he ventured at length. "We know it couldn't have been either Spears or young Carmody. Who else, besides this girl, is trying to help the criminal?"

"It wasn't an ordinary robbery," Peter insisted. "The place has been ransacked too thoroughly for that. It's bound to have some connection with the crime, in my opinion. It's up to us to find that connection."

"Suppose we are on the wrong track, after all? We must be, if the only persons who will fit into our present theory are accounted for at the time this place was searched."

Kilday snorted. "I think that girl has warped your judgment, Peter. I'll stand by my case."

Lesson for April 22

OUR ALL FOR THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 19:16-20. GOLDEN TEXT—I have showed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.—Acts 20:35.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Poor Rich Man.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Giving Jesus First Place.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Right Use of Money.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Stewardship of Possessions.

The lesson title is likely to be misunderstood and the teaching misapplied. Jesus did not directly, nor by implication, teach that eternal life can be obtained by parting with possessions. In his dealing with the young man, Jesus showed him his erroneous notion as to personal goodness and endeavored to reveal unto him his own essential nature.

I. A Certain Young Man Came to Jesus (v. 16).

For a full view of the characteristics of this man see Mark 10:17-30 and Luke 18:18-30.

a. His virtues.

a. Courageous (Mark 10:7). He was of high standing, a rich young ruler (Luke 18:18, 23). To come to Jesus at this time meant to this young man ostracism from national fellowship. It required real courage.

b. Earnest (Mark 10:17). He came and knelt before Jesus.

c. High aspirations (v. 16). He wanted eternal life. There was an aching void in his soul in the midst of pleasures which affluence brings.

d. Pious and moral (v. 20). From youth up he professed to have conformed to God's holy law.

e. He believed that Jesus could inform him of the "good thing" to be done to inherit eternal life.

2. His mistaken notions.

a. About Christ (v. 16). He esteemed Jesus to be good but did not apprehend him to be God.

b. Concerning himself. He was self-righteous. He thought he was good and that he could do something good.

c. Concerning eternal life. He thought that eternal life could be obtained by good works.

II. Christ Dealing With the Young Man (vv. 17-22).

Jesus skillfully led the young man to see his errors and then put his finger on the weak spot in his life.

1. Jesus' question (v. 17). "Why callest thou me good?" Without giving him a chance to answer he declared that only God was good, as if to say, "I am good and therefore I am God."

2. Jesus' answer to the young man's question (vv. 17-20). "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." Jesus here met him on his own ground, namely that of the law. The law reveals sin and thus shuts the mouth of a self-righteous sinner (Rom. 3:19). The law curses instead of saves (Gal. 3:10). The gospel was given to save men from the curse (Rom. 1:16, 17).

3. Christ's command (v. 21). Replying to Christ's citation of the commandments of the law the young man glibly asserted that he had kept them all from his youth up. In Christ's command to go and sell his possessions and distribute them to the poor, he put his finger upon the weak spot.

4. The young man's decision (v. 22). He decided against Christ. In the supreme test he chose his wealth.

III. The Relation of the Rich to the Kingdom of Heaven (vv. 23-26).

This teaching concerning the peril of riches was most timely. Covetousness was fast taking hold of the people. Judas was well under its sway.

1. It is difficult for the rich to enter the kingdom (vv. 23, 24). This difficulty lies not in the possession of riches but in trusting riches. The step from possession to trusting is a very short one. Riches are deceitful (Matt. 13:22). The tendency of increasing wealth is to destroy the nobler life of the soul. It hurls into security (Rev. 3:17); it leads to self-indulgence (I Tim. 6:9), and to pride (Ezek. 28:5).

Entrance of the rich into the kingdom is possible though difficult (vv. 23, 26). It is possible for the grace of God

a. To sanctify riches.

b. To so open a man's eyes that he may see his downward course and repent.

c. To change a man from self-seeking to self-sacrifice.

d. To make men humble.

IV. Rewards for Following Christ (vv. 27-30).

Those who turn their backs upon their country and possessions for Christ's sake shall receive a hundred-fold in this life and eternal life for the world to come.

Trust in the Lord

Perfect trust is something which is one of the most charming characteristics of childhood, and which it is a sad thing to see lost through bitter experience of the faithlessness or cruelty of those about the child.

Uplift of Optimism

He who thinks the world is full of good people and kindly blessings is much richer than he who thinks the contrary. Each man's imagination largely peoples the world for himself.

Nature Has Qualified

Butterfly as Chemist

In a report to the Smithsonian Institution Dr. Austin H. Clark marvels, and with reason, at the curious adaptability of the cabbage butterfly, a small chalky insect with white wings. In Europe the caterpillars feed on the leaves of cabbages and closely related plants. Why these? Because they contain food of the proper chemical composition for the young, and the young are bred from eggs laid on the leaves.

About the middle of the last century the cabbage butterfly was brought to this country. It began to lay eggs not only on cabbage but also on the leaves of the garden nasturtium, which originally came from Central and South America. How did the butterfly know that the nasturtium is chemically of the right composition, although it is not even remotely related to the cabbage? The European ancestors of the cabbage butterfly knew nothing of the nasturtium for thousands of generations.

The wonder grows when Doctor Clark points out uncanny powers in other insects. Two varieties of fritillaries live entirely on the hackberry tree. If they make a mistake in the tree they young starve to death. —New York Times.

Whose Fault?

When a Child Won't Study

"Kept after school!" And it isn't the child's fault, or the teacher's. His mother is to blame. How can a boy get his lessons when his senses are dulled day after day by dosing with sickening purgatives? When a child's bowels are stagnant they need help, of course. But not some drastic drug to upset the stomach, perhaps weaken the entire system, or form the laxative habit. On the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem:

Here's a boy who gets good marks, has time and energy for play. He is never ill, hardly ever has so much as a cold. When he does show any symptoms of being sluggish, his mother knows just what to do. She gives him a little California Syrup of Figs—and that is all. It's a natural, fruity laxative that is agreeable to take, and its gentle laxative action comes from senna. Parents are urged to use just pure California Syrup of Figs. Be sure bottle says "California".

Tinley Park Legion Aux. Unit

Mrs. Lester N. Stoltenberg,
Publicity Chairman

Memorial poppies which the women of the American Legion Auxiliary will distribute here on "Poppy Day", May 28, have been a means of providing employment to hundreds of disabled World War veterans through the winter and spring months. The little red flowers have made possible earnings of approximately $100,000 for these disabled men.

Making of the paper poppies which the American Legion Auxiliary offers on "Poppy Day" to be worn in honor of the World War dead is reserved strictly for the war disabled. It offers a means of employment to veterans unable to do other work and not only brings them money for the support of themselves and families, but aids in their rehabilitation by giving them beneficial, interesting work.

The poppies are made in government hospitals and in special poppy work rooms maintained by the Auxiliary. This year 58 different poppy making centers have been in operation in 40 states. Employment is restricted to men unable to do work of other types and preference is given those with families to support.
The paper poppy is used exclusively by the Auxiliary because its making is a hand, rather than machine process.

The best working conditions are,
of course provided for the disabled men employed in the poppy project.
The work is directed in such a manner that it will aid in the physical and mental rehabilitation of the veterans, as well as giving them financial benefits.

The poppies are exact replicas, in paper, of the famous French poppies which grew in such profusion on the World War battle fields in France and Belgium. Each flower has been carefully shaped by hand to a very realistic likeness to the wild European poppy—the memorial flower of the World War.

The money contributed for the poppies pays the wages of the poppy makers and helps support the Legion and Auxiliary's activities for the welfare of the disabled veterans and dependent families.

with the opening of a direct radio telephone circuit between San Francisco and Java. Service over the new channel is available to all Bell and Bell-connecting telephones in the United States, Canada, Cuba and Mexico. At the other end it reaches the island of Sumatra as well as that of Java.

Telephone communication with the Dutch East Indies has heretofore been maintained over a circuit employing two radio channels and land lines, by way of New York,
London, England, and Amsterdam, Holland.

The new direct service is established through short wave radio telephone stations of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company which handle the service to Hawaii and the Philippines. The transmitting station is at Dixon, near Sacramento, and the receiving station at Point Reyes, just north of San Francisco.

The length of the new channel is 8,700 miles. It will be the longest radio channel operated by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, being more than twice as long as those between New York and London and 1,700 miles longer than the circuit now in service between San Francisco and Manila.

Ask Tavern Keepers For New Insurance

Tavern keepers and owners of buildings in which rented taverns are located have been receiving letters from certain insurance companies asking them to take out insurance protecting them from damage in case any person or persons get drunk on the premises and meet with an accident after leaving the premises. These letters advise that tavern keepers as well as the owners of buildings in which taverns are operated may be held personally liable in the event of an accident or injury to a drunken person if the tavern-keeper or owner of building in which the tavern is located, carries no insurance against such risk.
